Q 1) Create Following webpage to demonstrate the various types of selectors in CSS using internal css:

Adjacent Sibling Example 4

Another adjacent sibling paragraph.

General Sibling Example 1

This paragraph is a general sibling of the heading.

Span: This span is also a general sibling.

Start of Div: This div is another general sibling. - End of Div

Another paragraph sibling.

Another heading that has general siblings.

Group Selector Example 1

Paragraph styled with the same group selector.

Span: Span styled with the same group selector.

Start of Div: Div styled with the same group selector. - End of Div

Another paragraph in the group.

Span: Another span in the group.

Start of Div:

This paragraph is styled with the universal selector.

Span: This span is styled with the universal selector.

Start of Div: This div is styled with the universal selector. - End of Div

This link is styled with the universal selector.

• This list item is styled with the universal selector.

- End of Div

This is a link with target="_blank" styled using an attribute selector.   This is a link with target="_self" styled using an attribute selector.   Text input   Email input

Start of Div: Hover over this box to see the effect. - End of Div

Start of Div: Hover over another box. - End of Div

Hover over this link to see the effect.   Focus on this input field   Focus on another input field

This paragraph demonstrates a pseudo-element. Notice the first letter is styled.

Another paragraph where the first line is styled using a pseudo-element.

Start of Div: This div has a pseudo-element applied to it. - End of Div

Span: This span has a pseudo-element too.

This heading demonstrates a pseudo-element.